Field Trip Planning Guide

Owl Creek Landing is ideal for groups, as it is accessible for any age and mobility. Once you enter the Nautilus Lookout Tower, it is a self contained experience in the trees. The tower itself is fully ADA compliant, providing an opportunity for every group member to enjoy the experience of being immersed in nature.

The Children's Treehouse Village is the perfect exploration spot for younger children, while all visitors will enjoy the bird's eye view of the forest as they walk the Treetop Trail Canopy Walk. With educational signage throughout the elevated and ground-level trails, visitors learn about the local flora and fauna of the forest. There's plenty to explore as you connect your visit to your curriculum in STEM, physical education or environmental studies.

Owl Creek Landing can accommodate group outings of any size, depending on time of day and availability. We recommend allowing at least 90 minutes for a visit, though there are no time restrictions. No equipment is needed, but chaperones do need to be actively supervising children as they explore the property.
